

Pixel Planet Today Turns 3!

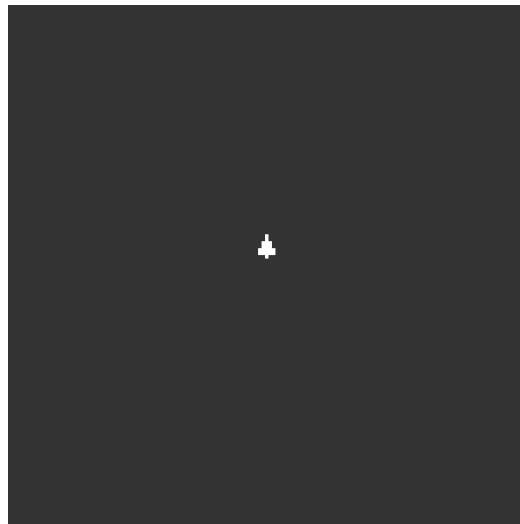

Three years ago today, I made the first Pixel Planet Today post. Celebrating my little pixel project's birthday has since been a time for celebration and plans of what's next. But this time, it's pretty big: we set up a company for this and our other environmental projects to call home (and it's called Terrabyte). 😊❤️🌍

NEWS

Flips hair* "The name's Terrabyte."

I'm so excited to announce that Pixel Planet Today is no longer just a personal endeavor, it's officially one small part of a company called Terrabyte! I set up the company just last month (and hoped to announce it by Day 1000), but it is finally ready for primetime! In these first initial months, I'll still be putting a lot of time into creating the business. But after that, I'm really looking forward to pouring more time into the first couple of projects. 😊

Don't be alarmed - Pixel Planet Today isn't going anywhere. If you're following the project (which I hope you are), you'll still see the pixel posts as you always have. However, if you'd like to stay up to date on the newly found company and its other environmental projects, you can follow Terrabyte on Instagram, Twitter, and YouTube! We'll cross-promote the most important tidbits on the existing Pixel Planet Today channels - but to see it all, you'll have to follow the Terrabyte channels.

The game: Pinekeepers

We gave you a sneak-peak on Day 1000, but now there's an official teaser! Pinekeepers is a retro-inspired game that turns trees saved in the game into trees planted in real life. You can check out the video on the YouTube channel (and, if you feel inclined, we'd greatly appreciate a like & subscribe) 😊🌲

While the game is in the very-early stages of development, you can follow our progress on the Terrabyte Instagram and Twitter accounts.

Bookmarks!

Wanting Pixel Planet Today merch but have more than enough stickers? You can now purchase digital versions of Pixel Planet Today bookmarks on the online store! We decided to go digital with the bookmarks sheerly for cutting down on shipping carbon emissions, but it also allows for quicker delivery. Each of the initial four designs reference the project in a few different ways, but individually have a unique feel.
